

Solar Return

Enigma Factsheet · Solar Return

A solar return is calculated for the moment the Sun returns to the same position as in the natal chart. The horoscope for that moment applies to the year of life that follows.

Variants of the solar return

Several variants exist for calculating the solar return.

- You can calculate the solar return for the place of birth or for the current place of residence. In the latter case, this is referred to as relocation.
- You can choose whether or not to take parallax into account. The position of the Sun may deviate slightly as a result, but the effects on the cusps are greater. Enigma applies parallax when you select topocentric positions in the configuration.
- Some astrologers use the sidereal return, the return position of the Sun in the sidereal zodiac. For this they calculate the tropical horoscope.

Interpretation

The solar return is a horoscope that can be interpreted on its own. But you can also examine the positions within the solar return in relation to the natal chart.
